1.0 TITLE

Pharmaceutical Science PhD Program

2.0 BACKGROUND

Pharmacy instruction at Howard University began in the "Department of Medicine" in 1868. The initial course, held in the evening, offered students "knowledge of the art and science of pharmacy." The first student graduated in 1870 and the program was re-instated in 2002. Since the reinstatement, the Graduate Program in Pharmaceutical Sciences has produced a number of proud graduates and prepares students for Doctor of Philosophy degrees.

Our mission is to provide pharmacy education of excellent quality to students with high academic, scholarship, and leadership potential, with particular emphasis upon the recruitment, retention, and graduation of promising African-American and other ethnically diverse minority students.

Our vision is to be a national leader in the development of highly talented, versatile regulatory professionals from ethnically diverse groups that are able to make a significant impact in their organizations and the communities that they serve.

We value diversity, integrity, professionalism, collaboration, cultural competence, and a commitment to excellence.

The purpose of the Howard University Graduate Program in Pharmaceutical Sciences is to develop experts in pharmaceutical sciences that are capable of addressing the unique challenges faced by traditionally underserved populations. Our graduates will take on these unique challenges by leading novel, cutting-edge projects in the following areas:

pharmacognosy and natural products, pharmaceutical chemistry, cheminformatics, docking, molecular modeling, organometallic chemistry, physical pharmaceutics and dosage form design, drug delivery, pharmacokinetics, epidemiology, pharmacoeconomics, biopharmaceutics, pharmacy administration, health services research, regulatory affairs and policy.
